Third American Road Congress.

The writer thinks and knows from what he acquired from others that this was one of the best Good Road conventions ever held and only regrets that there were not more with same interest at heart: knowing of some who could but did not attend. There were 2000 or more present from all parts of the United States and Canada. It was of interest and a great educator from start to finish. Everything was explained and demonstrated to each and all. There was the greatest exhibit of road making machinery ever exhibited on earth.

The Government exhibit of the old, ancient roads down to the present time were fine and could not be excelled. Our State exhibit of road making materials were fine and showed what could be used to an advantage in different parts of our state.

Everyone of the speakers on the "Building and Betterment of Our Township, County, State and National Roads," which are of vital interest to one and all, were able with enthusiasm.

Under the management of all cement manufactures each one was given an auto ride of from 20 to 30 miles over the concrete roads of Wayne county which are fine, and without a doubt, cement is the best known material for road building purposes on all good roads leading to any large city as the traffic is so great and heavy. The Wayne county road is made 12, 14, 16, and 18 feet wide. When out about 8 miles from Detroit you find the 18 foot road 10 miles, 16 and so on down to 12, which they expect to build all over the county. This road costs from $3,000 to $12,000 per mile.

I think for Crawford county, crushed stone product, good gravel, hard head field stone are the only thing as it gives us a far better roads than gravel at a very slight more cost.

I think we had better boost and get under the county system. I do not care whether there is any County road built at Frederic, that is not my idea—but we have thousands of acres of land, which we hope some day to be tilled by the farmer. Better land, better water, better climate is not to be had this side of California. Why not get ready as they are doing all around us—get ready for that good farmer which we want in our county. Get ready and give him a chance to stay instead of turning around and locating in some other "good roads" territory. The county system does not interfere with the township system in any way or manner. Make our township roads to connect with the main county roads. We have the name of having some of the best roads in (Continued on last page.)

Mrs. Etta Phelps Grand Martha of O. E. S.

The Grand Worthy Matron, Mrs. Melina Maxon, paid a compliment to Grayling Chapter No. 38 O. E. S. in selecting for one of the points, Mrs. Etta Phelps for Grand Martha.

Mrs. Phelps, well-known for her sincere work and interest of the order, being Worthy Matron for the past four years, beloved by all members of her own chapter, is fitted for the honor.

The Grayling chapter was well represented at Grand chapter, meeting at Saginaw last week. Those attending were Mesdames Etta Phelps, Elsie Roblin, Anna Herick, Anna Brink, Anna Olson and Miss Mollie Johnson.

The trip to Alma Wednesday afternoon to visit the Masonic home was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

This home is a place where about 80 aged people are so well cared for at present, and all speak of the comforts they enjoy. One Mason will be 101 years old this November, another over 99 years, several others in their nineties, the youngest over 60 years of age.

Every Mason ought to be thankful to be one to help support this beautiful Masonic home.

The delegates returned to Saginaw at 7:30 o'clock where the ritualistic work was done in the Masonic temple, by Past Worthy Grand Matrons in every chair.

While in Alma, the Grayling delegates enjoyed a short visit with our old friends, Rev. and Mrs. Fleming and son Ralston and Miss Russell.

The Big Comedy Success, "Brewsters Millions."

The production of "Brewster's Millions" at the opera house at Grayling on Tuesday evening, October 21, 1913, is an event of more than passing interest, as it marks the introduction into a strictly dramatic field, of Frederic Thompson, the creator and producer of New York's great Hippodrome with its wonderful productions, and Luna Park, the stupendous and magnificent resort on Coney Island. The fame of Frederic Thompson has resounded from sea to sea because of what he has done and it has all been so well done that it stands as a monument to his cleverness and ability.

Hospital Tag Day

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 18

The annual Tag day for Mercy hospital will be held on Saturday of this week, October 18. The committee on arrangement will be in charge of Mrs. T. W. Hanson, Mrs. M. Hanson, and Mrs. H. P. Petersen.

They have appointed committees of young ladies to be on hand in different localities throughout the village, who will gratefully receive your donations no matter how small.

Mrs. S. N. Insley will serve coffee and light lunch, at her home. Everyone is welcome.

A committee of ladies will be in attendance there to take any donations of fruits, vegetables, provisions of any kind, dry goods, or what ever you may wish to give, for the use of the hospital. If you cannot deliver the same, a message to Mrs. S. N. Insley, chairman of the donation committee, will bring some one for your offering.

The annual tag day for Mercy hospital will be held next Saturday, October 18th. Throughout the year many sufferers are treated and cared for at the hospital and many are destitute and unable to pay for the care they receive, yet they are not neglected. While they may not have the most exclusive service and a private nurse, they are given good, clean beds and all the attention that their conditions may require, besides medical and often times surgical attendance. This annual tag day gives the people a chance to show their gratitude—gratitude expressed not only in words, but real assistance by contributing their little mite which will go toward the benefit of the hospital and make it possible to continue the good work that it has so nobly begun. Don't forget tag day next Saturday. And don't forget that Mrs. Insley will serve coffee and light lunch all afternoon and evening at her home. Also don't forget that a nice donation of fruits, vegetables, provisions of any kind, dry goods or anything that one might wish to give will be acceptable to the hospital. By telephoning or addressing Mrs. S. N. Insley, the chairman in charge of this day's arrangement, donations will be called for, in case they cannot be delivered.

Charles Stanard.

Died at his home in this village, Monday October 13th, Charles E. Stanard, age 39 years.

Deceased was born in Flint township, Genesee county, November 17, 1874, where he resided until 1903, when he removed to Prescott, Ogemaw county, remaining a little more than a year, before coming to this county where he has since resided. He was married in July 1898 to Miss Jane Moore, of Saginaw county, who survives him, with his mother, Mrs. D. S. Stanard and a sister, Mrs. Minnie Eaton of Flint.

He was at work for the M. C. R. R. company during a part of the years of 1903 and 1909 when his health was impaired, keeping him from active employment for nearly a year, since which time he has been an efficient deputy sheriff for the county, and engaged in conducting a restaurant, until the past six months, while his life has been steadily drained away by tuberculosis.

Mr. Stanard was recognized as a man of sterling integrity, and with his wife, were honored members of society, and will be greatly missed by their large circle of friends.

Mr. Stanard was especially popular among the men, and numbered his friends from all walks of life, and throughout his illness there was general anxiety and his passing away during the early days of manhood has brought sorrow to many hearts. He was a member of the Woodman lodge, also the Loyal Order of Moose. Mrs. Stanard has the sympathy of a large circle of friends of both herself and Mr. Stanard.

A brief service was held at their residence Monday evening conducted by Rev. Gillies of the Presbyterian church and the body removed to Flint on the Tuesday morning train for interment in the family lot in the cemetery of that city, after funeral services at his old home church.

22 RIFLES

The Little Rifles—Big in Quality

YOU are going to buy a 22 calibre rifle, single shot or repeater—you'll find that many well known truck shots started with a Remington-UMC 22. Their advice now would be "By all means, get a Remington-UMC" because they know that there is a tendency in some quarters to look upon these models as only "a small boy's rifle" and to cheapen them so that they can be sold at a price.

You have just as much right to expect full shooting value in your 22 calibre rifle as you have in your 125 big game rifle. You want the Remington-UMC single shot at from $5 to $6. 22, 25-10 or 32 calibre, made by the same people who make the famous Remington-UMC Automatic Rifles.

Or, if you prefer the repeating rifle, the Remington-UMC single shot 22 Remington-UMC repeating rifle, at $10 and up. In your 22, 25-10 or 32 calibre, the same people who make the famous Remington-UMC Automatic Rifles.

MANY PERISH ON BURNING SHIP

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SIX
LIVES LOST ON LINER
VOLTURNO.

TEN VESSELS UNABLE TO HELP
IN HEAVY SEA.

When Waves Recede Next Morning
Over Five Hundred Passengers
Are Picked Up From Small Boats.

Fishguard, England—One hundred and thirty-six passengers of the Urquidino liner Volturmo perished in mid-Atlantic Thursday night when flames from the engine room swept through the ship.

There were 657 persons on board. Of these 24 were cabin passengers, 840 were in the steerage, and 93 belonged to the crew. Wireless S. O. S. calls brought ten ships to the rescue but the high seas and heavy gale prevented early assistance. However, 521 passengers have been reported saved.

The Volturmo was bound for Halifax and New York from Rotterdam. There were no Americans on the passenger list, the bulk of the passengers being composed of immigrants going to Canada. Among those on the ship were Russians, Germans and Poles.

It was not until Friday morning that the rescuers were able to transfer the Volturmo's passengers, and it was a matter of two or three hours at the least that meant the difference between life and death to the 821 persons who had been driven to the stern by the growing fire.

On Thursday night, as it fell dark, the 5,000 passengers of the ten ships that had come up to deliver Volturmo's people, had one of the most remarkable experiences that ever fell to people that sail the sea. They saw a ship burning in the center of a fleet unable to help. The flames leaping from the Volturmo illuminated the great waves that daunted the rescuing vessels.

These ten ships were the Carmania of the Cunard line, the Grosser Kurfurst of the North German Lloyd, the Happpannock, the Kronland of the Red Star line, La Touraine of the French line, the Minneapolis of the Atlantic Transport line, the Car, the Narragansett, the Devonian and the Seydlitz. Early on Friday morning the weather having moderated, these ships were able to lower small boats and take off the Volturmo's passengers.

Captain Barr of the Carmania, whose wireless message to the offices of the Cunard line in Liverpool gave the first news of one of the greatest marine disasters in history, placed the number that had been rescued as follows:

Carmania, 11; La Touraine, 40; Minneapolis, 20; Happpannock, 19; Car, 102; Narragansett, 29; Devonian, 59; Kronland, 90; Grosser Kurfurst, 105; and Seydlitz, 36, making 521 in all.

Wife of Prisoner Legal Widow.
Jackson, Mich.—That Mary Sierminkski on the 5th day of last April, when he was sentenced to Jackson prison for murdering his baby, but is now a widow by reason of such imprisonment and entitled to a mother's pension is the opinion of Attorney General Fellows handed down to Probate Judge Clarence M. Russell, who presented the question before him on application of Mrs. Sierminkski a short time ago.

The baby Sierminkski, so brutally killed was the only child at the time, but another child has been born since he has been in prison.

Strikers Confess Killing Pollack.
Calumet, Mich.—Confessions of complicity in the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Pollack, were obtained from three more copper mine strikers, making confessions from six of the eight men held under arrest, besides the partial confession of the dead striker, Joe Manerich, who was wounded by Pollack and died later.

The six confessions are practically identical, Manerich being blamed for the killing and it being claimed Pollack was ambushed, but that he fired the first shots when attacked, wounding Manerich.

DEPUTIES RELEASED FROM JAIL

Resignation of Huerta Is Demanded and Election On October 28 May Not Be Held.

Washington—State department advice from Mexico City announces that the 110 members of the Mexican chamber of deputies who were thrown into prison Friday night by order of Provisional President Huerta, were released Saturday.

The deputies had been arrested and lodged in the pen for signing resolutions or warning to General Victoriano Huerta because of the disappearance of the senator for Chiapas, Dr. Belisario Dominguez.

A proclamation was issued just before midnight calling for new elections of senators and deputies October 28, which date is coincident with the presidential election.

Additional advice to the state department were that in the turbulence that attended the dissolution of the congress a petition was circulated calling on Provisional President Huerta to resign. All the signers were arrested.

Many officials regarded the developments as bearing out predictions that no election day would be held October 28.

To Harness Falls For Light.

Washington—Great Falls, one of the historic and picturesque spots in the environments of Washington, will be harnessed and made to furnish the power for light and power to the national capital, provided congress is favorable to a recommendation to be made to it by the commissioners of the District of Columbia. The commissioners included in the district appropriation bill an item of $3,000,000 to provide for the purchase of the Potomac river water falls and the commencement of the work of controlling the racing stream.

Loan Shark Is Sentenced.

New York—Daniel H. Tolman, known as the "King of Loan Sharks," and proprietor of a chain of loan offices extending across the continent, was Thursday convicted of usury and sentenced to six months in the penitentiary by Justice Zeller in the court of special sessions.

Although numerous actions have been brought against Tolman, this is the first time that he has been directly connected with the making of any loan through his offices. In all previous cases he has escaped by placing the responsibility on a woman manager.

Duncan Robertson, 75, shipbuilder, is dead at his home at Spring Lake. He was born in Stirlingshire, Scotland, and served his apprenticeship in the great yards at Clyde.

One shoulder, an arm, and two ribs broken, and many cuts and bruises and internal injuries caused by a fall through a skylight taken by Allan Parker, 52, of Ann Arbor, at the Lusk foundry, resulted in his death.

An attempter holdup by two unidentified men in the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad yards at Petoskey, was frustrated by Brakeman Jake Zuercher, the intended victim, who swung his unlighted lantern on the head of one of his assailants, stunning him.

The state of Michigan cannot compel demurrage rules and charges for railroads doing interstate business. This is the opinion of Judge Hally, of Wayne county circuit court in a verdict given Saturday in the case of the Michigan Central against the state railroad commission.

Chosen to sit on a board of arbitration in a compensation case under the law in effect in Michigan for more than a year, Mrs. Lydia Kovala, of the mining town of Palatka, is the first woman in the state to serve in that capacity.

The barn on the farm of Mrs. Hannah Davidson, six miles southeast of Flint, said to have been the best in Genesee county, burned to the ground together with the season's crops. The total loss is $8,000, partially insured. The origin of the fire has not been determined.

Four human skeletons were uncovered by Albert Manktelow and Rev. A. S. Donat, of Cadillac, when they dug into a mound found between Lakes Cadillac and Mitchell. The mound was under a pine stump.

The offer of W. K. Burt to start a fund for an old ladies' home, with a donation of $10,000, contingent upon other money being raised by Baginaw citizens, has been given an impetus by the discovery that the will of the late Mrs. Louise C. Bartlett who died in 1903, left about $10,000 for such a home.

RUSSIANS FIND NEW CONTINENT

COMMANDER WILKITZKI IN A WIRELESS MESSAGE TELLS OF DISCOVERY.

LINE IN ARCTIC OCEAN NORTH OF SIBERIA.

Expedition Also Finds Diaries and Documents of Expedition Lost in 1900. New Island Is Discovered.

St. Petersburg—Confirmation of the discovery of new land in the Arctic ocean was received by the Russian admiralty in a brief official wireless report from Commander Wilkitzki, of the Russian navy.

The new land extends in a narrow strip from about 60 miles north of Cape Tchelyuskin, also known as Northeast cape, the northern termination of Asiatic continent, to 81 degrees north.

The admiralty expedition, on board the transports Taimyr and Waligatch, left Vladivostok in July last, and surveyed the coast from Kolyma, to Cape Tchelyuskin.

Commander Wilkitzki is a son of the famous hydrographer, who died last year. He wanted to go west to the River Yenesei to winter, but met with solid ice, and on this account proceeded in a northerly direction, where he discovered land extending for 200 nautical miles.

The expedition was then compelled by the ice to return toward the east. When passing Bennett island, in latitude 76.40 north, longitude 148.30 east, they found the diaries and documents of the ill-fated expedition under Baron Toli, which was lost in 1900. They also discovered a new island.

Bankers Close Boston Meeting.

Boston—The American Bankers' association closed its thirty-ninth annual convention here Friday. Further adverse criticism of the pending congressional plan of currency and banking reform developed from James J. Hill, of St. Paul, Minn.

Arthur Reynolds, of Des Moines, Iowa, first vice president, was elevated to the presidency, and W. A. Law, of Philadelphia, succeeded to the first vice presidency without contest, the name of James K. Lynch, of San Francisco, having been withdrawn. It was decided to hold the next convention in Richmond, Va.

Episcopalians Denounce Divorce System.

New York—A sweeping denunciation of the present system of divorce reached the house of deputies of the Protestant Episcopal church in a resolution introduced by the Rev. C. F. J. Wrigley, of the diocese of Long Island. The resolution asked the convention to express its sympathy with the effort of the international committee on marriage and divorce, which is trying to have the constitution of the United States amended to enable congress to enact uniform marriage and divorce laws.

Michigan Priest Is Honored.

Rome—Monsignor Edward Kozlowski, of Bay City, Mich., was appointed by the pope to be auxiliary bishop of Milwaukee, on the recommendation of Cardinal De La, secretary of the consistorial congregation.

The Rt. Rev. Joseph M. Koudelka, the present auxiliary bishop of Milwaukee, was appointed bishop of the diocese of Superior.

Jack Johnson's Bond Forfeited.
Chicago—Federal Judge Carpenter declared forfeited the $30,000 personal bond signed by Jack Johnson, negro fighter, when he failed to appear to stand trial on the seven remaining counts against him, charging violation of the white slave act. Johnson fled to Paris, where he is making a living by boxing in a circus.

Sixteen Killed in Panic.
Lemberg, Austria-Hungary—The fainting of a woman in a crowded synagogue at Chodorow, Galicia, caused a panic. Hundreds of women rushed to the doors and sixteen of them were crushed to death. Scores were injured.

The Kirkham Mattison Co., of Grand Haven, has purchased the building and machinery of the Ovid Furniture & Manufacturing Co.

Mrs. Mary Hicks, of 810 Church street, aged 80 years, was the winner of the lawn contest inaugurated by the "City Beautiful" committee of Ann Arbor. Despite her age the gardens of Mrs. Hicks were found to be the best laid out and most artistic of any in the city.

With the selection of Prof. George E. Diggs, graduate of Ferris Institute, as its superintendent, the Michigan state prison grammar and high school has opened its doors to the inmate population of Jackson prison.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, Secretary William Redfield and Governor W. N. Ferris are among the speakers on the program of the seventh annual convention of the National Guidance association, to be Industrial Education and the Vocational Guidance association to be held at Grand Rapids October 19-25.

Ground was broken Saturday night for the new $80,000 Agricultural and Science building of the Central State normal at Mt. Pleasant.

The largest store building in Branch county, belonging to E. K. Clarke & Co., drugs and groceries, at Colawa, collapsed for a distance of 50 feet back from the front, while workmen were in the basement reinforcing a 24-inch wall. The building is three stories high. The second floor was occupied by offices. No one was injured. The loss is estimated at $45,000 to $50,000.

NEWS OF MICHIGAN

Port Huron—Darryl Worcester was placed under arrest on a charge of stealing an automobile in Kalamazoo.

Battle Creek—Dr. A. H. Kimball, former health officer, launched a boom for municipal garbage collection and disposal.

Port Huron—Dr. Fred W. Lang has begun suit to recover $1,000 from Marquette City, which he alleges, is due him for services.

Port Huron—Capt. Arthur B. Glyfield, who for a number of years sailed the lakes, was found dead at the home of his parents here.

Kalamazoo—Members of the Twenty-fifth Michigan infantry met here. About 100 of the old soldiers, who were recruited from this part of the state, attended.

Grand Rapids—Dorine Boersma, four years old, fell into a boiler of boiling water and was so terribly burned that she died a short time later.

Battle Creek—Local merchants proved easy marks for a fashionably dressed woman who tendered large checks on small payments and pocketed the change.

Ann Arbor—In order to supply the demand for teachers who can coach high school teams the University of Michigan will institute a class to turn out coaches.

Moore—Otto Stender of River Rouge, charged with the theft of a horse belonging to William Dunbar of Samaria, pleaded guilty in the circuit court. He was remanded for trial.

Cadillac—George Dunlop and O. C. Kansas were arrested in Missaukee county for hunting without licenses. One had two partridges, but each man paid a fine of $14.30 in Lake City.

Bay City—William Dora, paroled a month ago from Ionia prison, was taken back because he stole an automobile belonging to Dr. J. M. Jones. Dora had served less than two years of a sentence of 15 years for burglary.

Jackson—At the meeting of the state suffragists here, November 5, 6 and 7, Jane Addams will be one of the principal speakers. The afternoon and evening session will be open to the public and will be in the nature of educational exercises.

Ann Arbor—The second annual chrysanthemum exhibit of the University of Michigan will open Saturday, October 25, in Alumni Memorial hall and will last five weeks, or until after the meeting of the Michigan Academy of Science, Friday and Saturday of Thanksgiving week.

Battle Creek—Harry Sovey, charged with the theft of a watch from George Wetzel, made a daring escape by jumping from the second story window of the courtroom in which his case was to have been tried, when the officer who accompanied him was called to the telephone.

Grand Rapids—Arrested for "ship-ping" school and feared industrial school in Lansing, Leslie Porter, fourteen years old, son of F. James Porter, attempted suicide by slashing his throat three times with a penknife. Porter is a pupil in the junior high school.

Port Huron—Joseph Mossey, charged with assaulting Mrs. Charles Lafarge, an aged resident of this city, will be tried as soon as a jail sentence, which he is now serving for violating his parole, expires. This will be October 10. Mrs. Lafarge, it is said, will never be able to walk again.

Bay City—Three years in the Detroit house of correction and deportation to Hungary at the end of his term was the sentence given Andrew Rongo by Judge Tuttle in the United States court. Rongo was arrested with several compatriots on a charge of robbing freight cars of goods in transit. He has a wife and several children in Hungary.

Pontiac—Clayton Gilbert and Gordon Bennett, held at the juvenile detention rooms here, escaped by tying the sheets of their beds together, and lowering themselves to the ground. The boys stole the effects of a third prisoner in the room, Douglas Black. The youngsters were held, suspected of the larceny of several bicycles. They are still at large.

Grand Rapids—The disappearance of James F. Brighton of this city for whom Ottawa county officers are dragging Grand river near Spring lake, may soon be explained. An anonymous letter, local authorities say, was received at the Brighton home last week. Brighton then dropped out of sight. Kent county officials scout the drowning accident theory.

Ann Arbor—Theodore Taylor, who was to have been sentenced to a charge of larceny, escaped from the county jail by sawing through two cell bars on the east window of his cellroom. A reward of $100 has been offered for his capture. Taylor had fallen in the cell on the evening of September 29 and injured himself so that the sheriff extended him the courtesy of a room by himself.

Ann Arbor—J. E. Elfring was buried in his gravel pit and narrowly escaped death. He was caught in a slide and buried up to his neck. Elfring was alone at the time. He called for help, but for two and a half hours no one heard him, and try as he would he was being buried deeper and deeper by the crumbling gravel. Just as he had about given up hope his wife missed him from the house, went in search of him and found him buried. His head only protruding. She worked alone, not daring to leave him to go for help, and finally was able to drag him out.

Albion—Athletic board of control of Albion college, which has supervision over all kinds of athletics at the Methodist institution, has elected its officers as follows: President, Robert Baldwin, Albion; vice-president, D. Stanley Coors, Shelby; secretary and treasurer, Prof. E. Roscoe Sleight, Albion. The board in future will leave the scheduling of all games and athletic meets to Coach Gill and the various captains.

Kalamazoo—Kalamazoo's recent water scandal will probably be one of the things that the grand jury will be asked to look into.

How the Revival Came

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D.
Dean of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

TEXT—Now for a long season Israel had been without the true God. II Chron.
16:12.

The condition of Israel calling for a revival at the time is set before us in the words, "Now for a long season Israel has been without the true God." To be without the true God is certainly a call for a revival.

But what is it for a nation, or a church, or an individual, to be without the true God? In the present case it meant three things: (1) They were without the ordinances of religion. "They were without a teaching priest, and without law." (2) They were without the inner experiences of religion. "In those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in." (3) They were without the outward blessings of religion. "And the nation was destroyed of nation, and the city of city; for God did vex them with all adversity."

Is not this the picture of a church or an individual professing Christianity who is without God? The gospel may be preached in that church, the ordinances administered, and the prayer meeting regularly announced, but the whole round of exercises, while possessing

Most Popular Fur-Trimmed Finery

EVERYTHING is trimmed with fur and already furriers are making up in what are called "millinery furs" imitations of martin, ermine, skunk, leopard, moleskin, mink and seal skin. These furs are used in bands and are used for trimming muffs, turbans, neckpieces and dresses. They border gowns at the hem, and sleeves at the wrist. Occasionally a high-necked blouse shows a narrow band of fur hugging the throat.

But it is in millinery and muffs (which are made of velvet or other fabrics) that fur bands appear as an indispensable part of the composition. Round, close-fitting turbans, Oriental turbans, small hats, a few of the larger ones that are beginning to emerge from their eclipse, are all taking to themselves the luxury and suggestion of warmth and comfort which is lent them by the fur band.

Millinery furs are called by the names of the furs they imitate, as "leopard," "fox," "martin," "mole," "leopard," "ermine." It is more than likely that Molly Cottonail provides many of the skins which are transformed by furriers into almost anything they wish to imitate. The opossum, the skunk, the muskrat, the coyote and others have and help out in providing furs for trimming, because there is a tremendous and increasing demand for them. The skins of these people of the wild are so disguised by the dyeings and markings and plectings and clippings of furriers that their masquerading is accepted easily. No qualifying "imitation" prefixes their borrowed names. They are used in the handsomest of millinery and garments, and they make it possible for "the many" as well as "the few," to indulge in good-looking furs.

The hats on which fur bands and collars are used are small and close fitting as a rule. Mostly velvet turbans, although plush and satin figure in the making of a good number of models. The combination of fur and velvet, or fur and satin, is more effective than that of fur and plush, in millinery. When long-haired furs are used they are cut in narrow bands, but short-haired furs, not so bulky, are invariably this season cut either narrow or wide.

In passing, it may be mentioned that fur must not be cut with scissors. The home milliner or dressmaker may cut them satisfactorily by marking a line with tailor's chalk on the skin side of the pelt and cutting along this line with a razor blade. In sewing seams two edges are held together and overcast. Furriers use a triangular needle, and it is far easier to sew skins with than the round needle. All three edges are cutting edges.

It will be seen from the picture that the muffs and hats are made to match, while the neckpieces are odd—of another kind of fur or plush. This is only a fancy not an established fashion. The vogue of plain skirts with plush jackets to match in color does away with the need of a neckpiece other than a band of fur around the collar. With such a suit a hat and muff to match, trimmed with fur like that on the collar, is delightfully chic and also delightfully comfortable. One can face any degree of cold with them.

The materials used for the muffs and turbans are many, velvets, plushes, broadened silks, broadened crepes, wide heavy broadened ribbons, satins and chiffon all contribute to the making up of these smart accessories.

Muffs are flat and soft. Lace is used for their trimming, and a touch of lace on the turban corresponds with that on the muff. As is usual when furs are much in fashion (they are never out) metallic laces have reappeared and are sparingly used as a decoration on fancy muffs and neck wear, and in touches of gold and silver on millinery.

Some of the muffs and turbans shown may be attempted by the home dressmaker with good chances of success. Before attempting them, however, she should examine a set made by professionals. There are many small items which if overlooked spell failure.

FILMY LINGERIE
FASHION'S EDICT
FOR THIS SEASON

CUMBERSOME clothes are things of the past. Soft and fine, the undergarments of today do not confine themselves alone to sheer muslins, but call lace and even chiffon into their fragile make-up. The latter is used for flounces and frills on garments which are seldom worn or that can be dry-cleaned. But the simplest lace is worn to withstand careful laundering and garments employing them are practical. Some of these laces—as German val and chamois—are very strong and will wear as long as nainsook or muslin.

Here is a corset cover which will please every woman who loves dainty finery. And is there one who does not? This pretty little farbelow is meant to be worn under sheer waists. Whether it shows through or not, it is elegant, and will make a Christmas gift that will delight the heart of its fortunate recipient.

From one and a quarter to one and a half yards of all-over lace will make two of these without any seams. Lace 18 inches wide is cut in two lengths, and the straight strip forms the little bodice. Beading and lace edging trim the top and form the straps over the shoulder. A wider beading of fine Swiss embroidery is made to the waist measure.

Baby gibbon is run in the beading at the top of the garment and tied in a full bow at the front. It is run in the shoulder straps, which are made of beading with lace edging whipped to each side. A narrow hem finishes each side of the front. Wider ribbon is run through the beading at the waist and tied in a bow at the front.

By way of adding the most frivolous and dainty of finishing touches, tiny chiffon roses in pink, blue and white with little ribbon rose foliage, is applied (in a short festoon) over the bust at each side. They are basted on, to be removed when the corset cover is washed.

The sewing on such garments is to be done by hand, but there is so little of it that only a short time is needed. Considering its beauty and inexpressiveness this corset cover is to be recommended as among the choicest of gifts. It is good enough for a millionaire, costs little, but, bought in the shops, sells for a high price.

Cretonne Slips.
Cretonne slips to put over frocks that are hanging in the closet or ward robe are convenient. They are made of two pieces of cretonne, cut in semi-circular outline, a little larger than dress hanger. They are seamed to gather about the curved edge, with a little opening left for the neck of the hanger.

To the straight edge two long straight sections of cretonne are gathered, long enough to come to the bottom of the frock. These straight pieces can be seamed together or fastened with tapes or socket fasteners.

Modes for Children.
Fine crepes are being used for the lingerie dresses of children in the Russian and empress styles. When in the Russian style the undershirt is generally of plain white crepe, with the tunic or smock of white crepe embroidered or printed in dainty posies, and the long sleeves are of fine batiste finished with narrow valen cienne lace.

The simplicity of the empress style permits the use of fancy crepes, unadorned, except for a narrow ribbon that defines the high waistline.

Novel Paris Bag.
Bags continue to be popular, and now one which has come from Paris is made of silk, either striped or all black, and is daintily fitted with card case, mirror and a watch.

CHANGE IN LOVE LETTERS

Typewriter of Today is Held Responsible for the Curt Notes of Cupid.

With the coming of the typewriter the art of writing love letters, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, seems to have gone out of fashion, and, instead of the ornate missives our grandmothers treasure, the modern love letter reads something like this:

"Dr. Em.: Yrs. recd. It was a daisy. Wish I cd. write as you do. Am very busy, but you know—same as ever. 'Phone me tomorrow. Will try to catch 3.30 Sat. Meet me at station. If it doesn't rain, we'll have a good game."

"You know what I think of you. So long. Aff. JACK."

Thirty years ago, if Jack's father had been writing to Emma's mother, this same letter would have read thus:

"Dearest Emmeline: Your dear letter this moment reached me, and the beauty of its expression afflicts me with a sense of my incompetency to reply in kind. But you know that my heart beats for you alone."

"Although my time is not my own, I feel that I must snatch a few sweet moments in which to assure you that in this letter I repeat all I ever said or wrote to you, and that I love you better than my life."

"If you could write to me every day in the same strain my work would fairly fly under my accelerated efforts. Such is the influence of your inspiring devotion."

"On Saturday I will be in the train which reaches S— at half after 3. If your dear face were there to welcome me, you know how happy I should be. Whatever plans you may make for our brief holiday I will gladly carry out. My own love, how can I tell you what you are to me?"

"I am yours devotedly and faithfully."

Seagoing Movies.
The movies are to form an important part of the equipment of every first-class transatlantic liner before long if current reports are true. Having abolished motion on shipboard, by triumphs of modern shipbuilding, the great transporters of the Atlantic may find that in this very immobility there is something lacking, and that something the moving picture.

It is hard to see where the men who plan marine comfort and delight could find anything better suited to evening entertainment for passengers who have exhausted the possibilities of the moonlight and the concert and dance than the cinematograph. There is no denying that, whether everybody ought to be musical in taste or not, a very respectable portion of humanity takes more enjoyment in film pictures than in solos or concert selections. It is equally indisputable that a goodly number of ocean travelers are of an age where the music of the moon on the waters is sometimes a bit of a bore, if the fact were known, and where the modern dances do not by any means excite the feet or even the more impressionable head.

Leaky Radiator Stops Car.
It may not seem possible that a leak in the radiator would kill a motor and prevent further movement of the car for more than an hour, but such was the case of one of the Indiana-Pacific tourists. The trouble, of course, was not due primarily to the radiator leak, but the magnetos being directly behind the point of leakage, it was affected and refused to give up any current. The water coming from the puncture in the radiator was blown back on to the magnetos, due to the force of the wind, with the result that the breaker points were short-circuited continually by the water. The driver examined every part of the motor and never dreamed of looking at the magnetos, for the instrument never gave any trouble, and being of a good make was not expected to die. A glance at the radiator leak and another at the magnetos near by concluded the search for the faulty part. The leak was repaired and the magnetos cleaned and dried, and the car continued on its journey to the coast.

One Good Thing to Get.
The stockbroker was busy and nervous. His caller was impatient and garrulous. He explained his ability to get for the broker important and confidential information.

"There's nothing you can do for me," said the broker, decisively.

"Nothing?" asked the caller.

"Absolutely nothing."

"Well, I think I could get you some stuff that would be exceedingly useful to you."

"There is one thing," said the broker, after a moment's thought, "which you can get me, and it will be of great use to me."

The visitor brightened up.

"That's fine! What can I get for you?"

"Out," said the broker.—Popular Magazine.

See Good in Woman Suffrage.
Professor Abe of Waseda goes into a lengthy review of the experience of the countries and part of America which have given the vote to women. On the whole, these results have been beneficial. Instead of using the privilege for the assertion of their personal rights, the women have utilized it for the cause of prohibition and for the improvement of the conditions of child life. Japanese politicians are inconsistent in that they hesitate to extend to women and laborers the political rights which they strive to wrench from the "bureaucratic clan."

For Suppression of Banditdom.
France runs England pretty close in the matter of leagues and associations. The latest French institution of the kind is the "League for the Suppression of Banditdom," which has just been established. The leagueurs are up in arms against the ugliness of the banditdom in France, but in view of the love of the French local authorities for these edifies, they have their work cut out for them.

PACIFIC RUSHES THROUGH BREACH MADE BY DYNAMITE AT PANAMA

The explosion of twenty tons of dynamite, the most ever exploded at the canal, rent asunder the dyke that held the waters of the Pacific from the canal. The breach left by the explosion was 500 feet wide. A few hours after the explosion, when the tide crept slowly toward the shattered dyke, a workman seized a shovel and dug a little ditch through which the water trickled slowly. Soon this little stream was converted into a rushing torrent which enlarged the gap as it swept on, and for the first time the waters of the Pacific washed the solid masonry of the Miraflores locks, then rushing on flooded that part of the canal between the locks and Gamboa.

AGAIN RAISING THE POPPY

Chinese Backslide on Their Agreement Not to Boom Business in Opium.

London.—The report of Sir J. N. Jordan, British minister to China, on the opium question, indicates that there has been some backsliding in the effort to suppress the cultivation of the poppy since the introduction of the republican regime.

The report declares that since the fall of the Manchus the policy of suppression agreed upon between China and Great Britain has been weakened and that there has been an immense recrudescence in the cultivation of the drug.

In the provinces of Anhui, Hunan and Shantung the campaign for the suppression of the cultivation of the plant has been successful, and in consequence the importation of Indian opium into these provinces will cease. But investigation in other parts of the republic tells a different tale. In many of the provinces the authorities are powerless to prevent cultivation. In others there is collusion between the powers and the growers, and in still others the officials are not inclined to deprive themselves of a rich source of revenue.

The reports, however, are not all from official sources, many being supplied by missionaries and travelers, so exact figures are impossible. The minister concludes with the statement that a great deal must be done before the work of suppression can be considered as complete.

SIRENS OF THE SEA

Those of Present Day Haunt Ships Instead of Cliffs.

Modern Enchantresses Live in Small State Rooms Aboard Palatial Liners That Fly Between Port of New York and Foreign Shores.

New York.—Those ancient entanglers of men who in the Mosaic mythology used their blandishments over mariners, have their successors today for those who travel by the sea.

The sirens of ancient days—Parthenope, Ligaea and Leucosia and the rest of their class—lived in cliffs and caves of islands between Sicily and Italy.

Their successors of today travel first class in sumptuous ocean hotels. They have discarded their wings and half-bird and half-fish costumes for Paris creations, with headgear from Fifth avenue and the Rue de la Paix. Long since the double flute of the marine sorceresses of Homer has been exchanged for a lorgnette, a fan or a cigarette.

The presence of the modern siren on the great ships of today is not known to the general and nonobservant traveler. But two classes know of her existence very well—her victims and the "gangplank" detectives.

There is and has been for two generations along the North river water front a regularly organized staff of sleuths and plain clothes men who are independent of the uniformed police and headquarters plain clothes men. The business has been transmitted from father to son.

The names of these marine detectives seldom appear in print, but they are very important people nevertheless, for they watch the passengers on ocean vessels and separate the sheep from the goats.

These quiet, unobtrusive men, who look like steamship men or managers of passenger traffic, glue their eyes upon every traveler passing up or down a gangplank, embarking this week and returning weeks hence. On the deck of the vessel within or without the three-mile limit violations of conventions or noncompliance with laws which obtain on land are difficult of detection.

The twentieth century siren, from a liking for the sea, chooses a swell suite on a liner in preference to the no longer poetic and now unprofitable habitation of Circe lying along the coast from the country of the Cyclops.

Instead of picking the bones of mariners, over whom they formerly exercised their power, strewing their skeletons thickly around their dwellings, they now dine in the floating restaurants of international name and pick the bones of pheasants and partridges instead. They drink rare vinegars, while the old style siren was presumably content with water. Over her and her movements the pier sleuth watches.

What his pocketbook, containing every known detail of offensive and defensive armor of every warship in the world is to the naval officer, so his little book is to the pier sleuth; for, as Koko says, the detective whispers of the siren, "I've got her on my list."

below the present bed of the river by the government engineers. It was an almost perfectly chiseled head cut in the solid rock. It was some six feet long and four feet wide.

In digging for the foundation of the big dam the engineers cut their way through a mass of sand and gravel to a depth of 80 feet, where they found bedrock. There was encountered a deep gorge, the original bed of the river, through which the stream centuries ago must have flowed as swift as a mill race.

LION CUBS OF CENTRAL PARK

Visitors to Zoo in New York Play Ground Frolic With Young Lion Kittens.

New York.—"Bill" Snyder, he who looks after the animals in Central park, and for whom the animals in Central park are always on the lookout for the "goodies," he carries about him, treated the visitors to the park to a near view of the five young "lion" lion cubs born in the park July 11. An appeal is being made to some public-spirited citizen or citizens for a fund of $75,000 with which to erect a roomy fireproof building wherein to house the most magnificent lion family in captivity, as well as for the accommodation of the tigers, leopards and pumas. To prove that the little cubs were no more dangerous to play with than young kittens, little Alfred Wilson, twelve years old, played about with the quintette of cubs to the delight of the awe-stricken crowd. The cubs are Men-elek, Dar-fur, Ben-ben, males, and Tana and Ju-ba, females.

Last Attempt to Remove Growth in Throat Proves Fatal to Baltimore Man.

Baltimore.—After undergoing more than 200 operations during three years for the removal of a growth in the throat that interfered with his breathing, George McDowell, twenty-one years old, formerly of Spartanburg, S. C., is dead at a hospital here. Death came while the surgeons were making a last attempt to save his life.

For the past 18 months McDowell breathed through a silver tube in his throat. He had been under so many operations that he became immune to the effects of cocaine. Freezing was resorted to and then chloroform to deaden the pain while they worked on the growth. The doctors knew that it was a muscular growth, but could not tell what kind. It contracted the man's windpipe and at times all but closed it.

FISH ENTER THE ICE HOUSE

Are Found Frozen Fast Between the Cakes—Eat Into Foundation.

Craig, Colo.—When R. A. Summers went to his ice house he was surprised to find several large trout frozen in the ice cakes. He knew that they were not there when the house was filled and looked about for an explanation.

The house is on the bank of Bear river and the water had eaten its way to the foundations of the building.

It is Mr. Summers' idea that the fish were attracted to the spot by the cooler atmosphere and entered the building by some hole, which later was stopped up. The river receded and the trout were left marooned between the ice cakes.

Pointing directly toward what was evidently the most dangerous spot in the gorge was discovered the arrowhead.

Says Wife Forced Him Into Debt.
New York.—In opposing the motion of his wife for alimony, Bernard B. Klug, a local lace merchant, told the court that his wife got him into debt by her extravagance in buying gowns and hats to attend "tango teas." Despite his argument Mrs. Klug was awarded $30 a week alimony.

Why Old Backs Ache

What a pity that so many persons past middle age are worried with lame backs, aching kidneys, poor eyesight, sick headache, dizziness, gravel, dropsy or distressing urinary ills. Kidney weakness brings these discomforts in youth or age and is a dangerous thing to neglect. It leads to Bright's disease and uric acid poisoning. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought new strength to thousands of lame backs—have rid thousands of annoying urinary trouble.

An Indiana Case

"My Back Aches," says Samuel Hazy, grocer, 311 W. 12th St., Ind., "my kidneys and bladder were in a terrible condition. My kidneys ached too frequently and my back ached terribly. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. It didn't take them long to cure me and I believe they saved my life."

Miss Laurel London, who has accepted a position as substitute teacher in the Peterson school district, three miles northeast of here, who walks back and to the school says: "walking's good, plenty of partridge to be seen along the way—from one to four each day, and school's a going fine."

Ed Clark, a former bandmaster of the Grayling band, has returned to this city and will once more take up the directorate of our band. He resigned from here nearly a year ago to accept the management of the band at Boyne City. Our band has been without a leader since the resignation of F. G. Walton, who went to Bay City, to take directorate of the Third Regimental band, at the beginning of the summer season. Mr. Clark and family are most cordially welcomed back to Grayling, and it is the desire of our citizens that it won't be long before we will again have the best band in northern Michigan. A band is a good booster for a city and shows enterprise and progressiveness. Every member of the band is a booster for Grayling and loyal to their home merchants, who by their contributions entirely support the organization. Mr. Clark will take a short vacation after a busy summer, before beginning work.

Don't forget that the Juniors will hold a box social at the opera house Friday evening, October 17.

This week Tuesday the W. K. C. ladies met in a body and cleaned the G. A. R. hall. At noon they were called to the festive board to partake of a sumptuous dinner prepared by the committee, and not the least of the good things they had to eat were the partridges donated by Chas. Feir and cherry pies furnished by Mrs. Chas. Schreck. And one and all expressed the hope that there were more squash on the vine from which Mrs. Amidon gathered her donation. About 2 o'clock they viewed their accomplished task with pride and went home feeling the day had been well spent.

Secure your tickets at once for the entertainment course as the first number is to be given next Monday night. Those who have investigated claim for it that it is fully equal to the best course we have ever had in this city. The management is not over anxious to make money, but your patronage is necessary in order to prevent financial loss. You may not be able to attend every number but you should buy one or two season tickets in the same spirit and way that you would contribute toward any enterprise that is beneficial to a town. Moreover you will get value received even though you should attend but a single number.

The Board of Supervisors met in annual session at the court house Monday afternoon. As this is the first meeting since April last it is quiet likely it will be a lengthy session. The problem of equalization of county taxes is going to consume considerable time. Altho we cannot speak authoritatively we believe that it will be the intention of the board to increase the county valuations to three million dollars to conform with the state valuation. The state tax commission has not yet visited Crawford county and it is the intention of our Board of Supervisors to place their valuations where they believe they should be and thus save the state board considerable time and expense to make an assessment of the taxable property of this county. Should they increase to the three million mark, it isn't going to make any difference in the amount of our taxes, but will naturally lower the percentage. The problem that confronts the supervisors is to endeavor to make the increases so that each individual property owner is properly and justly assessed and that no partiality is shown and also that the taxes of each township is increased to their true proportionate values.

A pleasant affair last week was the pedro party given by the Forester ladies on Thursday night at the lodge rooms in Temple theater. Progressive pedro was played, the first prizes being captured by Mrs. Arfield Charon and William McNeven and consolation prizes by Mrs. Peter Brown and Jesse Schoonover. After ten games were played luncheon was served. A large crowd was in attendance and everyone had an enjoyable time.

"Brewster's Millions," with a capable company will supply a full measure of enjoyable entertainment at the opera house on Tuesday evening, October 21. The subject alone, a young man forced to spend $1,000,000 in a year by legitimate means without taking any into his confidence, and arriving at the end of the period without one cent of money or a possibility of anyone of the dissipated fortune coming back in the future, appeals to novelty loving playgoers.

The Michigan Agricultural college will this year offer an attractive new "Two Year Winter Course in Agriculture." This course opens November 3rd, just after the busy fall season is over, and closes February 27th, before the spring farm work begins. This offers an unusually good opportunity for young men who wish to attend college during the season when they can get away from the farm. Practical, interesting work is given under the instruction of competent, experienced teachers. Students will be given the advantage of all the wealth of equipment of the oldest Agricultural college in America. For further information concerning this course write to Pres. J. L. Snyder, East Lansing, Mich.

The Shoppenagon monument has arrived and has been placed upon the cemetery lot that contains all that remains of the lifeless forms of Chief David Shoppenagon and his wife. Both passed away during the later days of the year 1911. Chief David closing his eyes after a long life of usefulness and adventure upon the beautiful Christmas morn of that year. The monument erected to his memory is of blue granite; it stands about six feet high upon a solid cement base. It is plain but artistic and at the top is a ball setting in an ornamental cap. On the face is carved the words "Chief David Shoppenagon; born 1809; died December 25th, 1911." It is a fitting memento of the esteem in which he was held by his friends in Grayling. The monument was purchased with money raised by popular subscription.

We had no idea that when started in to tell something of the corn crops of Crawford county farmers, that it was going to bring on such an interest and competition. It seems that every farmer that brought in samples has had something that was a little better than that of his predecessor. One good feature of the matter is that nobody is jealous but are glad when one of their brother farmers can show something a "little better." John C. Failing, of Beaver Creek, brought in an armful of corn last week that was as nice corn as we have ever seen raised in the counties of Barry, Eaton, Lenawee or Kent, places where we are quite familiar with the products of the farm. Some of the ears measures twelve inches in length. The rows are entirely filled out and solid. Mr. Failing says that he has about six acres of this corn. Through the courtesies of some of our farmers we have as fine an exhibit of corn, at this office as any one would care to see. Should there be any doubting Thomases as to the quality of the corn raised in Crawford county, we most cordially invite their inspection. We have the goods right here and they may be seen at any time.

Rubber Stamps at this office.

First prize, $1,000 in gold and lesser prizes for all others. Read the Bay City Times advertisement in this issue and find out about their plan.

Joseph Komer who was tried in Bay City on the charge of perjury, was found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment at Lonia for a term of not less than one year and with the recommendation of the Judge of two years. He is wanted at Cheboygan for bigamy. In all probability, at the end of his imprisonment at Lonia, he will again have to face the bar of justice and if convicted, suffer himself to be again incarcerated for a number of years.

Miss Grace Angers, a former nurse in Mercy hospital in this city, was received into the Order of Mercy, at the Mother house in Big Rapids, yesterday. Miss Angers will be well remembered by many Grayling people, especially those who have been patients at the hospital. While here she made many warm friends. Rev. Father J. J. Riess attended the ceremonies and preached a sermon in the Mother house, at the time of the reception.

Dr. S. N. Insley had the misfortune to dislocate his left wrist, at about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, when in the act of cranking his car in front of Lewis' drug store. The motor "kicked back" hitting the Doctor on the arm and knocking him down. It was first believed that his arm had been broken. The Doctor says that it will be about three weeks before he will be able to use his arm again. Dr. Keyport, being in Chicago at the time, and Dr. Merriman also being out of the city, Dr. Curnalia, of Roscommon was sent for and attended him. Dr. Keyport was informed of the accident by telegraph and he arrived home this morning.

N. Michelson brought into this office a small twig from an apple tree, Monday, that contained five apples, of the King variety. The five are in a solid cluster and average 11 inches in circumference. The total weight of the cluster is two pounds, ten ounces. Each apple is sound and perfect and so near uniform size that it is difficult to know just which is the largest. Mr. Michelson says that he has about 25 acres of orchard and every tree is loaded with fruit. We will have these apples on exhibition for a few days at this office and anybody wishing to see them are invited to call. This section of Michigan, particularly Crawford county is becoming recognized as a great apple country. Besides having the second largest apple orchard in the United States, we are producing some of the finest fruit that can be raised anywhere.

CHAPTER I.

The Prophecy.

Professor Desmond, astronomer in charge of the Peak Observatory, glanced into the reflectoscope—that wonderful new instrument for scanning the heavens—then withdrew his eye from it and stroked the polished glass gently with a piece of chamois skin. Then he peered again. Just above the eastern horizon he saw a speck so minute that a layman would not have noticed it at all, yet which caused the scientist to blink and grimace, for he knew that in all reason the speck should not be there, and its presence on the glass irritated his professional eye as though it had been a particle of foreign matter on his own iris instead. For a moment he watched it with a face that seemed by second growth, tenser and more drawn, then springing to his feet he swung the secondary telescope upon it. On either side of him and rising to within a few hundred feet of the observatory were the crests of other peaks, towering, rugged, swimming in the thin air more than a dozen thousand feet above the level of the sea, while below was a dizzy sweep of canyon and gorge that at last smoothed themselves out to the plain upon which stood the city in the very shadow of the mountains. Tense as a man stretched upon a rack he peered through the telescope across the million miles of space that intervened between his eye and the speck, and as he did so the sweat began to burst from his temples in tiny beads. For several minutes he looked, turned from the glass to the reflectoscope again and then began a series of rapid computations, finished them, swung to the long distance telephone and jammed his thumb upon the button labeled "Washington." A moment later he was talking to the head department direct, his voice calm and incisive.

"Hello, Washington! This you, Headmann? This is Desmond of the Peak. There is something coming directly for us from due east and just above my mountain horizon. I have been observing it for some moments both in the reflectoscope and glass and have made my computations. Its speed is tremendous, its size small—I would say perhaps a quarter of the moon's. It is not a fragment, but rather a complete body, and to all appearances is a small satellite with a circumference of say a thousand miles. How is your eastern weather? Thick? Then you probably will not be able to get a look at it. It is about a million miles away at present and is coming at the rate of perhaps two hundred thousand miles an hour. Unless I am greatly in error it will strike the earth somewhere in this region in about five hours—about nine o'clock tonight. Of course you understand what that may mean. I have nothing more to say at present." He hung up the receiver without awaiting a reply, sat thought engrossed for a moment, then put his finger upon another button.

"Hello, Associated Press! This is Desmond of the Peak Observatory. A short while ago I happened to notice a foreign body in the reflectoscope that seemed to be approaching us from a comparatively near distance as space distances go. I immediately put the telescope upon it. At that time, which was but a few minutes ago, it was perhaps a million miles away and appeared to be a small satellite. Its speed is tremendous—computed like its size perhaps three hundred miles in diameter and a thousand miles around. I am not prepared at this moment to hazard an opinion as to its density other than it is undoubtedly a solid. Furthermore, in all probability it is going to hit us somewhere in this region within a few hours. I leave the information up to you to use or not as you see fit." From the other end of the wire came the incredulous voice of Kelly, the man of the press.

"Come now, Professor, that's good. It would make a fine scare head, but you don't want us to put you on record as saying that, do you?" The listener's brow corrugated.

"Have I been in the habit of sending out false reports?" he demanded sharply, and at the tone of his voice Kelly ceased his silent chuckle.

"No, you never gave us anything before that was not—pardon me—entirely plausible. And of course we all know and appreciate your high professional standing. But this thing is really so remarkable, you know—so very extraordinary! Is it not just possible that you are mistaken as others have been in this direction time and again?"

"I have never prophesied or believed in the probability of such a thing happening before. But my eyes are good, my mind normal, my instruments and mathematics accurate and I cannot doubt such evidence. I thought you might wish to know about it, that's all. Use it or not as you see fit." The voice of the other came quickly back, the newspaper man's instinct now dominant.

"Certainly I will use it with all the pleasure in the world—well, not exactly with pleasure either. But you know what will happen to you if I scatter that story world wide and it turns out to be a false alarm. I am looking out for you and ourselves at the same time. It will mean that if things don't materialize as you say you will be the laughing stock of the world and thoroughly discredited in your profession. We have had astronomical scares before and you know how they have all turned out—pure bugaboos. And I'd hate to see you ridiculed. You understand my position."

"Perfectly, and I will assume all responsibility for the report. It is good of you to be so interested in my welfare."

"Not at all. I'll have them yelling extras on the streets from Maine to California within an hour. What shall I say it is—a baby planet, moon, satellite—quick now, for I want to get into action."

"Just call it a small body, apparently dense and of great velocity."

"Any idea where it falls from?"

"Not the slightest. It is something heretofore unknown."

"Has it an orbit of its own or is it flying off on a tangent?"

"I cannot tell you. But it is coming straight for us, straight as a stone flail. It will hit the western hemisphere of North America at nine or ten o'clock tonight."

"Will it destroy us?"

"In the absence of precedent it is impossible to state. But the earth will probably know that it has been hit."

"Will it be visible to us at any time?"

"From certain points if the atmosphere is favorable. But it will arrive by dark."

"What can be done? Anything?"

"Nothing at all except wait, and if you are religious pray."

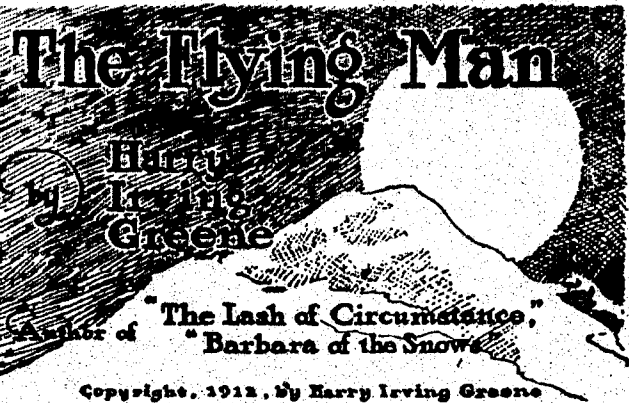

"The crash of the newspaper man's receiver at the far end of the wire and the blank silence which followed told Desmond that the other had dashed away for the telegraph key, and hanging up his own instrument he wiped his forehead and for a moment sat lost in thought over what he had done. He had staked his jealously guarded professional reputation upon one of the wildest improbabilities known to science, and come what might, it was now too late to recall his actions. Nor would he have done so if he could, for he had been the victim of some unaccountable hallucination. He knew that he was not mistaken, and useless though he had believed it to be to warn the world against a calamity wherein mankind would be as helpless as ants, he had yet considered it to be his duty to possess them with such facts as he had learned. Yet now in the reaction the colossal magnitude and unbelievable wonder of it all dazed him, and he leaned back weakly in his chair with his eyes fixed upon the floor as he pondered over his own position. One of three consequences must happen to him. If he was suffering from a delusion he was, as the press man had said, a ruined man, disgraced, discredited; and the tears of the world would ever ring in his ears, while he was correct and the impact took place he would either be crushed like a fly beneath a mountain, or surviving by some miracle, and himself among the most famous of men. Vortly he was in the hands of a destiny so colossal that all the armies and navies of the world and all its teeming billions of humanity to back them were as impotent as a swarm of gnats to alter it, and arising with a face the color of wet ashes he placed his things in order with unusual care, as one might who was about to take a long vacation, and with a last look at the beloved instruments so infinitely more delicate than the human senses locked the door and departed, taking his seat upon the little car that ran down the steep cog road to the city below.

He entered the bustling place just as the sun dropping behind the western peaks left the first shadows of evening to steal swiftly across the plain. Scarcely three-quarters of an hour had passed since Kelly of the Associated Press had dashed the receiver or into its hook and darted for the telegraph key, but already the howling newboys were scampering about with the agility of young apes as they gathered their horde of nickels from the shrieked prophecy of the dire death that was hurtling down upon them, fighting for dropped coins as coyotes snap and wrangle over bones, as little mindful of the promised clash of celestial bodies as had two knights of the squared ring challenged each other to plucky mortal battle. Desmond, watching them, doubted not that they would have stood dauntlessly screaming their warms before the onslaught of a Jupiter, scrambling for the coins in the very shadow of the approaching monster. With a cynical curiosity new to him he scanned the faces of those who purchased the news which he had sent forth to the world, watching them as they read the huge headlines bearing his name, reading in their faces their varied emotions—their doubt and their incredulity, their open derision, he heard the comments of those who had purchased the scare head extras.

"Another high brow says a moon or something is going to drop on this evening. Guess I'll have to put up my umbrella."

"Bet you twenty to one she misses us."

"Fine bet that. If I won what good would it do me—buried a hundred miles deep?"

"You can't always tell. Those wise boys hit things right once in a million times."

"And just think, Julia. If it hits us it will break up the dance."

"A scheme to sell more yellow newspapers."

"Absurd, impossible, unscientific!"

"He says it is as big as this state."

"Glad the state ain't Texas, then."

From a nearby corner a band of Adventists began to chant to the beating of a drum, seeming to glory in the direful prospect. "He who repenteth in the last hour may yet enter the holy Kingdom. Come ye while yet ye may and be saved for the end of all earthly things is at hand, woe, woe."

Angry, disgusted, amused, Desmond turned upon his heel and started for a nearby hotel that he was accustomed to frequent, but he had scarcely taken half a dozen steps when a hand fell upon his arm and he looked up to see the half-serious, half-smiling face of his friend Alan March before him. He paused, saluting.

March slipped the professor's arm beneath his own. "Come along, now, and tell me all about it. Might as well know the worst first as last."

He announced as he scanned his friend's face as closely as a physician might scan the features of a patient of whose sanity he was slightly in doubt.

"What was your idea in starting all this excitement anyway—or is the report a canard conjured up by some enemy or practical joking alleged friend of yours?" Desmond shook his head.

"No, it is my own message, and as you will readily appreciate, I have staked my reputation upon its accuracy. If I am wrong I will be the butt of the world, a clown, a buffoon, a lunatic. Despite myself he drew a sigh. It did not seem possible that such a grotesque calamity as he had prophesied could occur in a universe of such perfection, God-made, where each stupendous body of unthinkable space lay balanced to a hair against its countless neighbors of hundreds of millions, yes, hundreds of billions of miles away; where a perfection inconceivable to man seemed to rule through both infinity of time and space. And now that he had had time to ponder over it, it seemed to him that it must all have been a dream, a dream so vivid that he had upon awakening mistaken it for reality. Yet if he had been asleep then with his die cast he would stick to it to the last and either go down to disgrace as a false prophet, or in case he survived the cataclysm stand erect and vindicated in the eyes of all mankind. Allan spoke again.

"In common with all who know you I have a high respect for your scientific attainments, your level headedness and your thorough integrity. Therefore I am convinced that you fully believe that this awful catastrophe will occur to us as you have prophesied. The only element of doubt in my mind is the possibility of any man, no matter how careful or learned, to err—especially when dealing with infinite distance and the mysterious laws of space. But of course all we can do is wait and see how it turns out. And that makes me think of another matter. Miss Fulton is going to give a little lawn party tonight at her home, Japanese lanterns and all that, and I had intended to be one of the also present. It suggests itself to me that one might as well be out in the open as cooped up somewhere in case your mysterious wanderer arrives, therefore I shall go as I had originally planned."

"By all means. In case there was a collision anywhere hereabouts it would probably make little or no difference where one happened to be. Even if the world withstood the shock, an area as large as several states would be buried miles deep in the debris, and how far beyond that area life would be destroyed no one can say."

"Then I would suggest this. In the face of such an event we might as well be as resigned as people can who half expect to be hit on the head by a world at any moment—especially for the women's and children's benefit. We don't want any panics, at least before we are hurt. Personally speaking, I believe I can make my peace as well when I am mingling with my friends as I could alone in a garret and upon my knees, and I imagine you can do the same. Therefore I wish you to come also. Doris will welcome you, and I have no doubt but that the timid ones will regard you as something in the light of a protector and be more at ease. Will you come?"

They paused in front of the hotel for Kelly Desmond had been bound and he ran his eyes over the face and figure of his friend as he debated as to accepting the invitation, mentally commenting for a moment on the vigorous strength and strong, handsome face of this young civil engineer who was so rapidly winning fame and fortune by his skillfulness and level headed judgment. And as for Miss Doris—he had often thought her to be the prettiest girl he had ever met. Doris of the hazel eyes and wavy chestnut hair, and he really did want to see her again. And while at any other time he would have accepted with alacrity, now with his threat hanging so heavily over them he was uncertain as to whether he could with propriety place himself in their midst. Also, there would be those who—in a friendly manner to be sure—yet who as rank skeptics would be certain to poke ridicule at him, at last until the promontory disturbances which must to a certainty usher in so momentous an event began. Yet on the other hand to sit alone in this obscure room with four blank walls surrounding him, retreating like an animal to his cave, upon this night which he believed would be the most eventful of any since the dawn of the earth's history, or to wander at random amongst strangers and be pointed out on every side by vulgar fingers and be compared to the gentleness of their derision and abuse seemed still more undesirable. He cleared his throat, still uncertain as to what he should say.

"While I thank you, I cannot promise now as I am uncertain as to just what my movements will be during the next few hours. But I still bear it in mind and if I decide to come I will make my appearance somewhere between eight and nine. In any event, convey my best wishes to the company—especially to Miss Fulton—and tell them all that I sincerely hope that I have suddenly become entirely irresponsible for my sayings. As for you personally, I hope to see you in the near future, whenever and wherever that future may be."

He grasped Alan's hand, pressed it for a moment and then walked quickly away, leaving the other gazing after him with meditative eyes. Then with a shrug of his shoulders which might have indicated either doubt or resignation to the inevitable March went his way.

Scarcely had Desmond taken his seat in the dining room of the hotel than he became uncomfortably aware that he was the center of interest of all eyes. A hush fell, several waiters crowded about him and stood staring with open mouths until with a motion of disgust he motioned all save one away. From nearby tables ladies and gentlemen laid down their table implements and gazed at him with little better manners and full as much in silence as he had the menials who served them. From several quarters little ripples of laughter arose, but tolerant, half smothered, and he felt the blood rush to his cheeks in full tide as he lowered his eyes to the menu. Anger began to arise within him, not at the servants but at these ignorant though well dressed vulgarians who stared at him so insolently or mocked him to his very teeth, and for the first time in his life he knew how it felt to be one man against a world. And well he knew how unforgiving, how merciless, how cruel they would be forever afterwards should his dire warning go the way of all similar ones in the past. And in that moment he felt a resentfulness arise within him such as he had never felt before—a resentfulness that the prophecy would come true regardless of the consequences that these giants of space should meet like two battering rams in a crash which would echo to the stars the accuracy of his judgment, the fulfillment of his prophecy, the verification of his sanity. True, thousands and perhaps millions of lives would be destroyed in the colossal grind, but what of it? They must soon die anyway in the natural order of things, and if the master of space had sent this special thunderbolt against them, that in itself was proof good enough that it was time for them to perish, else the bolt would not have been sent. Then quickly following this came a great flush of shame that colored his cheeks to even a deeper scarlet, and he felt like flaying him- self with a lash of scorpions as a penance for his flash of savagery. He grasped the menu card, and scarcely looking at it began to order almost at random. Half way through it a messenger boy burst upon him with a score of telegrams, and forgetful of his dinner he tore them open and began to read. They were from all parts of the city, the country, the state—even the United States. They were from friends and acquaintances. They were from men and women of whose very existence he had never heard. They were from plebeians and millionaires, from ministers and statesmen, from lawyers, doctors, scientists, priests. They derided and they threatened, they upbraided, begged, prayed, and implored. In the midst of them he came upon this one sent by the chief at Washington: "Desmond, care Peak Observatory: 'Make no more statements to the press regarding threatened collision until you have heard from me further. If your prediction is fulfilled this bureau will be destroyed by an act of the Almighty, if it is not fulfilled the bureau will die of shame. In either case you seem to have settled us.'"

"HEADMANN, Chief."

His face gone white now, he crushed the mass of sheets into a ball, and, arising, left the room with his dinner a forgotten thing. Walking as though in a trance and seeing the curiosity filed faces about him but mistily he faced a wrong hat and plunged uncertainly into the street, thoughtless of where he should go.

"CHAPTER II.

The Collision.

He went rapidly yet uncertainly, at most at random. His wrong hat, as on wrong end before, his rumpled hair protruded in wisps beneath its rim. His eyes were set and staring. At every corner the newboys still shrieked and flaunted their damp wares before the eyes of all who passed, on every hand were straggling groups and solitary individuals with noses buried in the sheets, while from several quarters came the insistent throbbing of the drums of the Salvationists, the shouting of the Adventists and the fervent shouts of their self-righteous curbstone preachers as they ejaculated or threatened the populace in the name of impending and universal doom to come to them, be blessed and saved, or falling to be passed on to everlasting torment. Wandering down street after street, frequently turning corners with the zig-zag instinct of the pursued, Desmond for the first time became thoroughly imbued with the magnitude of the movement which his voice had started. He saw men reeling from saloon to saloon and momentarily becoming more drunken upon the strength of his announcement that this would probably be their last night of earthly life. He saw scrubby men strewing their savings which had been earned upon their calloused knees into the fingers of jostling ruffians. He saw women kneeling with tears streaming down their crimson painted cheeks; he saw erstwhile staid men of respectability hurrying into public houses, for what purpose—good or evil—he could only guess. He saw the stolid march of the undisturbed whom nothing short of an earthquake could impress; he saw the satirical smiles of the cynics, the bolsterousness of the reckless, the maudlin bewilderment of the weak of mind as they swayed alternately between doubt and despair, and he saw here and there an earnest faced one hurrying silently past or slipping into church or chapel. From somewhere in the city a church bell was booming solemnly, and from this place and that came the sound of voices that discorded in a jumble of rag time and psalms. He saw human nature keyed to its highest pitch and taut as a harp as it sounded its manifold notes of harmony and jangle. He saw the wicked become virtuous and the virtuous wicked, the thief restoring and the erstwhile virtuous thief, while above and around this human bedlam hung the stillness of air such as often precedes a great electrical storm. And this was but one insignificant spot upon the continent! And if this was but a sample, what then was happening in the great cities of the land which were strewn from the Atlantic to the Pacific—what nameless crimes and outrages which must be laid at his door if he had erred. Fortunes gathered together by years of labor would be scattered riotously in one debacle. Murderers would be committed, suicides done, souls damned—and out of it all so little good could come. It would have been better, far better, if he had let them die as they had lived, unwarned like those who are stricken in their sleep. He had been criminal in his thoughtlessness. Alternately he berated himself with savage venom or prayed despairingly as he plunged from street into alley and alley into street as he sought by turnings and doublings to escape from the things which haunted him on every side.

He stumbled from a refuse cluttered alley out into the light of a broad thoroughfare, sleekly groomed and bordered by the houses of the city's more fortunate and better class. Here it was quiet and orderly as usual and in his relief at having left the rabble behind he breathed deeply of the fragrant air, straightened his hat and hair and proceeded more leisurely upon his aimless way. Before him he saw a yard generously studded with trees, from the limbs of which pale Japanese lanterns glowed in softly tinted radiance. He paused and glanced about as he collected his thoughts. Yes, it was the residence of Judge Fulton, and this was the lawn party to which March, taking advantage of his own acquaintance with the Fultons, had invited him in the name of Doris. He was near enough now to see the forms that strolled carelessly about or sat upon the summer seats beneath the trees, near enough to even catch a tinkle of laughter from some softly gleaming white throat as the lady responded lightly to the jest of her companion, as to the horror so soon to come. He paused in indecision. To return to the lights and sounds from which he had just escaped was unthinkable, while before him, though there was more skepticism than in the rabble, there was also decency and order. For a moment his mind wavered between retreat to some solitary corner and a bold advance to the companionship of those beyond, then with sudden determination he pressed forward, threw open the gate and entered.

March, seeing the grizzled head and tall, gaunt form of his friend as he slowly approached up the walk leading to the house, spoke hurriedly into Doris' ear. "It is Professor Desmond—of course you have met him. You know I took the responsibility of inviting him to drop in among us. I thought he might wish to be among friends tonight in case—well, in either case, you know." She smiled in swift acknowledgment, and powdery could there be found a smile sweeter than Doris', either in her light or sometimes serious mood.

"I want to thank you for asking him to come. We will make him our lion. I have always admired him, and had I known all this was to happen would certainly have asked him to come, in the hope of somewhat diverting his mind as well as our own. He must be under a greater strain even than the rest of us, for he believes more implicitly than we." She went lightly forward, her hand outstretched, frank welcome shining in her large hazel eyes.

"Professor Desmond—I am delighted to be so honored. Have you any late news to encourage us?" He shook his head with a grave smile as he bowed over her hand and then straightened up with his usual dignity and ran his eyes over the assemblage.

Books Held as Beyond Price

Volumes in Which Visitors to Royalty Have Inscribed Their Names Are Most Carefully Preserved.

Two new visitors' books have recently been provided at Buckingham palace, and the old ones have gone to the many others that are in the safe keeping of the Lord Chamberlain's department.

The value of these books to autograph-hunters is almost impossible to estimate, and some sensation was caused about the court a few years ago when it was announced that one was missing. Fortunately a careful search revealed its whereabouts.

The books are bound in crimson leather, with an imperial crown stamped on the back, and are secured with a silver clasp. As a rule, each book lasts for about two years, but upon the occasion of the death of King Edward over a hundred pages were taken up with signatures of callers.

One of the books is kept at the ambassador's entrance to the palace for the use of the diplomatic corps and official visitors, and the other is at the querries' entrance and is used by the general circle.

Everyone entering or leaving the palace is called upon to sign one or other of these books.—Tit-Bits.

His Playmate Was a Canary.

Various are the alleviations of which the patients at the Royal Hospital for incurables avail themselves, says the London Telegraph. A number of pet birds are cared for in the interest and entertainment of those no less unwilling prisoners of incurable disease.

Among these pets there was a cock canary, the loss of which has been mourned by all who were acquainted with its remarkable intelligence and its many amusing and attractive qualities. For years it was set free in a large room, where it would fly about in perfect confidence. To its owner in particular it was so responsive that it would return again and again, regarding the performance as a sort of game; it would also allow itself to be freely handled, and delighted in a prolonged tussle upon a table, or a chase round a ball of paper. It listened to its owner's remarks with the closest attention and appeared to understand in a wonderful manner what was suggested of it.

Finance as She is Wrote.

To add to troubles of the Wall Street man forced to spend his summer in the city comes the necessity of employing a substitute stenographer in vacation season. With all street dictation is hard enough for the regular stenographer, the substitute finds it next to impossible.

The employer of one of the substitutes not long ago tried to be particularly careful and distinct in his dictation. Nevertheless, "comptroller of the currency" emerged as "comptroller of the corn belt." A remark about the drought district in Kansas was interpreted as "grouch district in Kansas."

Reverting to money matters again, the employer talked about taking bullion into the Bank of England, and the copy showed that bullion soup had been taken into the bank.

At a draper's shop they employed a small boy to run errands. The other day, while he was waiting in the shop, a lady came in and asked the assistant for a yard of silk.

When it was placed before her she exclaimed:

On hearing this the boy rushed out of the shop, and, seeing a policeman across the way, ran up to him, shouting:

Endurance Counts Most

WHEN your sheds are full of machines and one or two are crowded out into the open, which is it that invariably stands outside with the sun and the wind beating on it every day, drying and warping the wood, or with rain rusting the iron? It's the wagon. Other machines are stored away, dry and covered, yet many of them work for short seasons only. The wagon works the year around, is always under the strain of heavy burdens, always getting rough treatment. It can't stand the strain of such a life for many years unless, like I H C wagons—

Weber New Bettendorf
Columbus Steel King

it has built into it the utmost of endurance, toughness, and sturdiness. I H C wagons are built of wood of very best quality, every bit as good as they look. Look them over, you don't find any cross grained, knotty, split, or faulty timber. Every stick—oak and hickory for the wheels, yellow or bay poplar for box sides and long leaf yellow pine for bottoms, is selected from first grade lumber and carefully inspected. Every stick is toughened and seasoned by two or three years of air-drying.

All steel and iron parts are chosen with the same end in view—greatest durability and longest life. Experts test and verify every part. Before the wagon is ready for you it must pass many thorough inspections. The timber, metal, shaping and fitting, painting, every detail must be just right.

Buy one now, watch its steady service on your farm, and mark this—your future reliance will be on the I H C wagon. That future order is our ultimate aim. Columbus and Weber wagons have wood gears; New Bettendorf and Steel King have steel gears. See them at the dealer's. Get catalogues from him, or, write the

the state. Let's boost for more and better roads.

I think Rep. J. J. Colten and I. K. Gile from our county will bear me out in what little I have said.

"Good roads and education go hand in hand," said Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris in his address to the Good Roads congress at Detroit Friday on "Rural Life and Good Roads." He made the statement on the strength of figures on illiteracy he had gathered from different sections of the country, which showed that the sections with the most good roads boasted of the highest percentage of learning and that the ratio of illiteracy grew as "good roads" diminished.

"Hell is alive today and doing more business," he asserted in a plea for higher business standard and more thought for the whole rather than individuals. He urged the public control of amusements. The idea that hell is dead is wrong. It hasn't been abolished or banished. Long ago, hell use to be imaginative, but the hell of today is real.

"Our schools, and churches and libraries are under the control of public authorities to see that only the elevating and the good are taught and learned. Yet our moving picture shows, our vaudeville houses, our drama, our dance halls are run by private individuals, with little or no regulations. It is not right. But until the people are educated out of their lethargy, matters will continue as they are.

MUST AWAKEN PEOPLE.

"The greatest difficulty in all movements for the betterment of mankind is to awaken the people to the fact that they need betterment," continued the governor. "When the masses are convinced that we need better roads they will gladly pay for them. The religious, educational and economical future of our country is closely allied with the good roads movement. Good roads will play a great part in the religion of this country. The last word in religious affairs has not yet been said in America. With good roads we will have fewer and better churches and fewer and better ministers and the religious life of the people of the country will become as important as the industrial life is today.

"It is only through good roads that the country and the city can be brought together and the country boy will see that there is no better than the country has all the advantages it should, and can only have through the construction of good roads."

ater's Millions," with which to enter the dramatic world, Mr. Thompson has found a vehicle worthy his endeavors and one which will sustain his reputation. Those who have read the book can appreciate it as a play. So odd, so entirely different in theme and treatment from any other work of fiction, and yet so possible, so plausible, so cumulative and so intensely interesting.

"Brewster's Millions" marks a distinct triumph in late dramatic achievements. Scenically and mechanically it is a Frederic Thompson production. No more need be said. That means it is the best that can be made, to which must be added the additional flavor of his remarkable ability as a producer. The cast is a remarkable one. The star part—that of Montgomery Brewster—is played by Louis Niles, one of the very best of the younger generation of American actors well and favorably known throughout the country. The supporting company includes Katharine Francis, Emily Burke, Maise Ivie, Earl Christie, Beniah Leighton, Jack Murray, James Morey, Frank Backus and other well known players.

CLEAN HANDS AND
A PURE HEARTPictorial Language of Bible
Amazes Pastor Russell.

The Significance of the Picture—What It Is to Ascend Into the Holy Hill. What Is Meant by Standing in the Holy Place—Who Have the Clean Hands—What Is Signified by a Soul Lifted Up to Vanity—Who Are Those Who Swear Deceitfully—The Terms and Conditions of the Divine Rewards—Christ the Great Exemplar.

(PASTOR RUSSELL)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6.—Pastor Russell addressed the Washington Temple Congregation this afternoon, from the text, "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in His holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart."

(Psalm 24: 3, 4.) He said: The pictures of the Bible astound us with their clearness, force and pointedness. The Prophet David was not writing with ordinary poetic license, but was stating poetically grand truths which he himself could not fully appreciate. St. Peter tells us that this was the case with all the Prophets.

Then the Pastor, interpreting his text as a prophecy, showed that Mt. Zion typified the Messianic Kingdom, and the holy place of Israel the antitypical Temple of the future, Jesus Christ being the chief Corner Stone and the faithful saints the living stones.

The context shows that the Psalm applies primarily to the Lord Jesus Christ. "He that hath clean hands" would signify he who is willing and able to keep the Divine Law perfectly. "He that hath a pure heart" is he in whom there is no admixture of dishonesty or selfishness or sin. The Lord Jesus alone could and did keep the Divine Law, both in letter and in spirit.

Other Texts Were Necessary. The full keeping of the Law was not the only requisite in the great Heir of the Abrahamic Covenant. He must fulfill all prophecies concerning Messiah.

In these God had caused to be set forth tests respecting the humility and loyalty of the One performing them. The Pastor showed conclusively from Scripture that our Redeemer fulfilled these requirements perfectly, and through obedience entered the Messianic glory. He did not swear deceitfully, but kept to the very letter the Covenant of Sacrifice which He made with the Father. Neither did our Lord "lift up His soul unto vanity," nor hearken to the Adversary's insinuations.

On the contrary, He humbled Himself even unto the death of the cross. Because of His faithfulness, God gave Him a name above every name—Messiah, the King of glory. "Lift Up Your Heads, Ye Gates."

Pastor Russell interpreted the remainder of the Psalm as a picture of our Redeemer entering into His glorious reward. The ushering of glory into the house and glory of the Kingdom, establish righteousness in the earth, to put down rebellion and sin, and to destroy the works of the Devil, is really the ushering in of Jehovah's Kingdom, for which we pray.

The result of Jesus' conquering work, begun at Calvary and to be completed during His Millennial Reign, will be that Jehovah will be hailed Lord of all. In accepting the terms of the Kingdom the world will really be bowing to Jehovah and entering that condition where He can grant them endless life.

"Partakers of His Holiness." Then the Pastor discussed the Church of Christ, whom God has been selecting from amongst mankind since Pentecost. Unlike the Redeemer, these are members of the fallen Adamic race. Our first thought would be that they would be debased by Adamic imperfection from participation with the Savior in His coming glory. But Divine Mercy has made a special arrangement whereby these may become acceptable with the Father now.

The special provision for the Church is that if they make a Covenant of Sacrifice, as Jesus did, the Redeemer will appropriate to them that share of forgiveness and restitution which otherwise would be theirs during the Millennium. This the Scriptures designate "justification by faith." Such then are acceptable to God, and joint-heirs of Jesus Christ, if so be that they suffer with Him.

Thenceforth they are treated as New Creatures, and not according to the flesh. With these the standards are heart intentions, not flesh perfection. The Bible shows that they are pure in heart—loyal to God; otherwise they could not have been begotten of the Holy Spirit. As for their hands—lives—the New Creature never had soiled hands of impurity and willful sin. All flesh imperfections are covered, through the Redeemer's blood.

But not all who entered into covenant relationship with God through Christ keep their Covenant faithfully. Those who do shall share Jesus' glorious reward. These "more than overcomers" follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. While some will fail and will receive a lower blessing, yet the foreordained number will share with their Lord the Kingdom and the Divine nature.

A Marvelous Escape.

"My little boy had a marvelous escape," writes P. E. Bastians of Prince Albert, Cape of Good Hope. "It occurred in the middle of the night. He got a very severe attack of croup. As Jack would have it, I had a large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger." Sold by all dealers.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicine

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicine containing opium, morphine, heroin or other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That clears out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It contains no morphine or other sedatives. For sale by all dealers.

THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is, "Why does God permit evil?" As we look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every trial we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT. We realize that He is almighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs, and we know how much that means; yet oftentimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THESE SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.
